

Stormy Space Weather

Weather satellites follow clouds, track storms, and provide the data needed to make important meteorological forecasts. But there's another type of weather out there that requires some satellites to direct part of their attention away from Earth, too—it's called space weather!

